Emily M. Chilson is a registered patent attorney and a non-equity partner at Andrus Intellectual Property Law.

Emily focuses her practice on domestic and international patent and trademark prosecution and enforcement. She researches patentability and infringement issues, and provides clients with counseling and written patentability and clearance opinions accordingly. Utilizing her own engineering foundation, Emily often helps clients brainstorm ways that new product designs can be fine-tuned to work around existing intellectual property rights.

A good portion of Emily's patent experience includes mechanical technologies, including engines and related control systems, transportation-related equipment and sub-systems, machinery used in the paper industry, pumps and circuits, and metal cutting machines. Emily also focuses her practice on obtaining both utility and design patent protection for wearable apparel and consumer packaged goods.

Emily joined the firm after receiving a juris doctor degree from Marquette University Law School in 2011 (summa cum laude). While at Marquette, Emily served as technology editor of the Marquette Law Review, the same journal in which she published her article "Patent Term Adjustment and Terminal Disclaimers: Are the Terms of Patents Being Decided Ad Hoc?" in the fall of 2010.

Prior to attending Marquette, Emily obtained a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from Northwestern University in 2007 (cum laude). She then worked for a local surveying and engineering company before begin-
