Jason W. Krueger is a registered patent attorney and associate attorney at Andrus Intellectual Property Law. Jason's practice focuses on domestic and international patent prosecution, intellectual property strategy, portfolio management, and patentability and freedom-to-operate analyses, to help innovators and businesses protect and maximize the value of their inventions. Through strategic patent and intellectual property counsel, he helps clients identify opportunities, manage risk, and align their IP strategy with their business objectives.

Jason's bachelor's degrees in mechanical engineering and business administration, combined with his experience as a Master Electrician, give him a unique blend of technical, legal, and business experience. This multidisciplinary background enables him to quickly understand complex technologies and bridge technical, legal, and business perspectives to develop intellectual property strategies tailored to his clients' objectives
